ICCO Symposium:

The design team for this ICCO symposium is extremely excited to announce a symposium like none other held before by ICCO. This symposium will bring together coaching program managers from across business sectors to present cases and be coached by expert coaches to help presenters arrive at solutions that lead to sustainable coaching programs.

Join ICCO for this intimate forum that brings all stakeholders of coaching in organizations together to an event that surely will be provocative and productive. Don't wait to register—as always, participation is limited to 35.

ICCO Colloquium:

ICCO is pleased to announce its Colloquium, the first to be held in conjunction with ICCO's signature Symposium events. The Colloquium is a remarkable strategic inquiry process using tools to help participants create breakthrough thinking and extraordinary collaboration. This event will bring together coaches and coaching program coordinators across all business sectors to create a community of practice for learning and networking. This event, separate from the Symposium, will help bridge the insight and energy of the Symposium toward sustainable action. We want you to know about this event now so you can save the date and plan to attend!

Who is ICCO?

The ICCO is a uniquely broad community of managers of coaching programs in organizations, executive coaches, internal coaches, coaching educators, researchers and coaching firms. Our distinct multiple stakeholder composition and our client-centric emphasis provide an approach to advancing the profession of coaching that actively involves all the critical players, especially the organizations that use coaching in order to succeed.

What does ICCO do?

- We create settings where all audiences touched by organizational coaching can come together in intimate, senior conversations for the advancement of the field.
- You will learn with a broadly diverse convocation of people. We shape, advance, and promote organizational coaching by providing a forum where our members engage in global knowledge-sharing, dialogue, and networking.
- You will expand your perspective. We survey and recruit thought leaders in each of our stakeholder groups. We co-sponsor research projects and international think tanks.
- You will be invited to leading-edge learning events where you will be able to build an invaluable network. We envision a “United Nations of Coaching” a body of divergent opinions and perspectives, alert to the ideas of others, collaborative, inclusive, respectful of differences and transparently apolitical.

In order to succeed, people need a venue within which to have rich generative dialogue, have access to seasoned, experienced professionals to learn best practices, trends and foci for all stakeholders in the coaching world. By applying some of the knowledge, skills and characteristics of extremely outstanding examples of best practices you can stay in tune with cutting edge trends in our fields of practice.

We create conversations that don't happen anywhere else. Our events cross the typical silos between users, practitioners and educators. In no other profession do the users and practitioners partner and make decisions about the profession's future.
